It has finally arrived!.....Tinnitus Solution

A hearing device that can be used for tinnitus control. Tinnitus instruments are based on the idea of diverting attention away from the disturbing ear sounds. They make it easier to listen to “external” sounds again instead of permanently concentrating on those annoying “internal” sounds. This is achieved by emitting a sound that draws focus away from the tinnitus.

You can choose from four different therapy signals. When you have found the one that best matches your tinnitus, the Hearing Clinician can fine-tune the therapy signal so that the tinnitus sound is drowned out. Afterwards, you can always adjust the volume easily and discreetly using a remote controls.

Many tinnitus patients also suffer from some degree of hearing loss. The hearing device can be used as hearing instruments alone or in combination with the tinnitus therapy signal.

Hyperacusis relief: When certain environmental sounds are perceived as “painfully loud”, this condition is known as hyperacusis. Thanks to their flexible programming, the devices are suitable for some hyperacusis treatment and can

Hearing: Frequently asked Questions!

Q: Can hearing aids cause a “lazy ear,” or cause my hearing loss to worsen?

A: No, wearing hearing aids will not make your ears “dependent” on the devices. When you remove the hearing aids, your hearing loss will be the same as before you inserted them. In fact, the opposite is true. The longer your hearing loss goes uncorrected, the longer your brain has to “forget” what speech sounds like. This may decrease an individual's potential for improvement once he/she devices to move forward if that individual has “put off” getting hearing aids for a long time.

Q: With my new hearing aids, I'll hear again like I did when I was 16, right?

A: No, unfortunately. We actually “hear” with our brain, not our ears. Our ability to perform important auditory tasks, such as listening in noise or listening to fast speakers, begins to decline when we're in our 30's and 40's. So, simply putting on hearing devices does not restore physical damage to our ears caused by noise, hereditary factors, or medications....nor does it reverse aging of the brain. It is similar to buying a pair of brand new tennis shoes and expecting to run and jump like we did when we were 16!
